His Check for a Round Million Would Be Promptly Honored.

A SAFEGUARD AGAINST PANICS.

The Stock Market Suffering From Too Much Bear and Too Little Bull. BIG LUMBER DEAL BY PITTSBURGERS

Speaking of millionaires, a gentleman who is acquainted with many of them remarked yesterday: "There are some very rich men in Pittsburg, but only one, I think, who could draw a check for $1,000,000 and get the cash on it. While other millionaires have their wealth tied up in business of various kinds, he has the bulk of his in bank in the shape of hard cash, ready to draw upon whenever he sees an opportunity to make a big strike. He is a shrewd business man, and very seldom makes a mistake in an investment. A few years ago he purchased a large tract of mineral land in the Northwest, in payment of which he drew his check for $000,000. That was the largest single transaction of which I have any recollection."

Maintains a Fair Average.

The local banks continue to report a full supply of money. Rates are steady at 526 on time and call paper. There was a limited borrowing demand yesterday. Clerical business was a fair average, but featureless. Currency was scarce, and considerable gold was used in settiling balances. The Clearing House report

In the local stock market the bears seem to have the upper hand. This is patent in the treatment of Electric, Philadelphia Gas, La Noria and in a few others of the so-called selves these stocks would go up like a toy balloon. While in the long run a good steady bear has the best of it, there is such a thing as over stepping the mark-killing the goose that lays the golden eggs, for instance. A little more bull would greatly revive business at the

Pittsburg capitalists are rtill hungry for mortgages, showing that they have faith in real estate. Thirty-seven of these liens were recorded yesterday, representing about $50,000. The largest was for $14,000. Seventeen ranged

Some people look upon the abundance of money as an evil; others think it is an element of strength—a safeguard against panics. One of money as an evil; others think it is an element of strength—a safecuard against panies. One of the latter class, whose name stands high among local bankers, said yesterday evening: "We have over $500,000 of idle money. Some other banks in the city have more, some less. While we would like to have it employed and bringing something in it will do no harm while lying in our vaults, and we will have it when business begins to expand and the big crops begin to move. The fact of so much idle money in the country indicates a widespread conservative seatiment and an absence of the speculative craze, which are an assurance of a sound financial condition. When people borrow only what they need for the proper conduct of their business there is not move an inclined to think short selling would be a mistake. The market looks the other way to me." cial condition. When people borrow only what they need for the proper conduct of their business there is not much danger that they will fall into bankruptcy. This seems to be the general policy this season. If persevered in a squeeze of any sort will be impossible."

The American Architect says that in 35 cities the outlay in buildings of all kinds, so far this year, is estimated at $70,000,000 more than up to this time last year. New York leads off with an increase of $18,000,000; Philadelphia with between $4,000,000 and $5,000,000; Pittsburg with ben $2,000,000 and $3,000,000, and so on, clear to the Pacific coast, where in some parts, at least, something like a building boom is an progress. So far as information is available from the smaller cities and towns, the increase over las

Here is an incident showing how easy it is to make money if one only knows how. It was told in a whisper by one real estate broker to another, but somehow it leaked out. Unfolding a plan of lots on the Northside, he said: "Here is a daisy (pointing to a lot about the middle of the plan). I sold it a year ago for $500. The purchaser held it for some time, got tired of it and sold it back to me at the same price, less the interest. In a few weeks I found a customer and sold it for $500. When I told $95%c. Total sales, $70,000 barrels. the first purchaser of my good luck he com-menced to kick himself and has kept it up ever since." The moral of this is: Property bought at a low figure should be held on to. It is at-most certain to advance. There are very few lazy men in Pittsburg, but now and then one may be found. They are, next to croakers, the worst pests of society. A man who is too lazy to think about his work man who is too lazy to think about and to study to the end of knowing something of the principles underlying the art, not only will not get any higher in the scale of workmen, but he is too lazy to do his work property if there is opportunity to the contrary. He is the man who will be left behind in the race all

Of the tractions, clearly the state of the tractions, clearly the state of the tractions, clearly the state of the state of the tractions, clearly the state of the state the rise were absent a material advance was scored over all the list. London figures came at times during the afternoon, but little impression was made upon prices, and the strength in several specialties toward the close gave a firm to strong tone to the entire market. The close was dull and firm at close to the best prices of the day. The trusts were never prominent, though there was considerable business done in lead and sngar, and the latter, after a drop of over I per cent rose to 116.

Radiroad bonds were again quiet and firm, though the dealings as usual of late presented little or no feature of special interest. The sales of all issues aggregated $1,577.000, of which the Chesapeake and Ohio 5s contributed $115,000 and Richmond and Aliezheny $118,000. The important changes are very few, but are generally in the direction of higher prices. Long Island firsts rose 2\%, to 128, and South Carolina incomes 2\%.

harness leather is almost certain at an early harness leather is almost certain at an early day. Sole leather is firmer in the east the past few days, and from present outlook we are likely to be kept busy the next few months."

The leather industry, as is well known has been dull the past year, and now the signs are that bottom has been reached, and that we are to have an upward movement. Manufacturer's here will be among the first to reap the benefit of an advance, as Allegheny sole and harness leather are always at a premium in the world's markets. Though the capacity of our home tanners has been doubled or more in the past fire years, there is little doubt from present outlook that stuff will all be taken the coming fall at outside rates. Though margins of profit are greatly reduced, as compared with former years, the increased volume of trade will farnish a fair compensation to decline of values.

New England Handleapped.

The closeness of margins has, in recent months, had a disastrous effect on New England leather manufacturers, where the item of bark is a much larger factor in expense than here. The failure of a prominent shoe firm in Boston recently led to the assignment last week of one of the beavy leather firms of that city last Friday, namely, William F. Johnson & Co. Times have been rough of late to New England tanners and shoe dealers. In this city all are as solid as the hills, and though margins are uncomfortably close, there is a good time coming for the fittest who survive.

Several months ago an interview with one of the leading Allegheny tanners was published in this column in which the prediction was made that New England tanners were operating at a loss, and that it was only a question of short time when those who were not firmly established, and with good bank accounts abead, must go to the wall. Said the gentleman interviewed: "On the amount of leather our firm manufactures annually we have an advantage of $10,000 in bark alone over New England tanners, and we are having little or no profit. Look out for breaks in the tanning industry of New England." New England Handleapped.

Facts About Hides. Light weights are still slow and dull, as are calf skins. Heavy steer hides are firm at old prices. Said a leading dealer: "Our July trade was ahead of last July in volume, and August was ahead of last July in volume, and August shows no falling off. We have sold more so far this year than for the corresponding period of last year. But trade has to be pushed. The time has gone by when hide dealers can rest on their oars and wait for trade to come to them. The only way to win in this time of close margins is to go for trade, and not wait for trade to come. We have sold more goods this year than last only by pushing things, and as it is, though we work harder, we make less profit."

The fact is daily developed by interviews with merchants and manufacturers that there is no salvation these times for those who neglect printer's ink and fail to push trade. Instead of waiting, Micawber-like, for something to turn up, the winner in the business battle must go to work and turn something up.

The Drygoods Market. NEW YORK, August 6.—The general demand for drygoods was moderate, but it included important orders for staples and department goods.
